dominant segment for this area	of households fall into this segment	of households fall into this segment

Who Are They?

Members of these communities reside mostly in lower-density, rapidly growing suburbs in the South and Midwest. Most householders are between the ages of 35 and 64, and households are mainly comprised of large families with children. Marriage rates are high. Members of this segment are often employed in professional roles and earn middle-tier incomes. Many are self-employed, and some households support their earnings with interest, dividends, or rental properties. Available housing is predominantly composed of single-family units built in the 1990s and 2000s, with home values and rents that mirror national averages. The rate of new development is notably higher here than in most other regions. Many households have multiple vehicles, and long commutes are common.

4th	6.9%	4.5%

Who Are They?

These neighborhoods tend to be concentrated in New England and the Mid-Atlantic. Some couples have children who have grown up and left the house, and around a quarter still have kids at home. Residents work in professional fields such as management and finance. The combined wages of both spouses position these families solidly in the middle to upper income tiers. Investments, retirement income, and valuable properties also contribute to the high net worth of households commonly found in these neighborhoods. Residents in this segment gravitate toward suburban communities, which include both newly developed and well-established areas, within major metropolitan areas. Nearly all homes are single-family and owner-occupied, with very few rental properties available, and most homes were built between 1970 and 2000.

dominant segment for this area	of households fall into this segment	of households fall into this segment

Who Are They?

Residents in this segment typically live in and around urban centers and in suburbs in the South and West. The population is younger and has larger family sizes than the U.S. average, and households typically include parents supporting young children, adult children living with parents, and other multigenerational family structures. Single-parent families and households without couples or children are also notably common. One in five residents were born outside the U.S., and the rate of linguistic isolation is more than twice the national average. Employment tends to be in skilled and service-related sectors, including construction, and households typically earn middle-tier incomes. Homes tend to be owner-occupied, single-family detached units built before 1990, with most valued between $100-300,000. The housing market is characterized by low vacancy rates and moderately high rents.
